PDQ Manufacturing, Inc., Employees Take Part In The ALS Association’s Ice Bucket Challenge

True to its reputation as an innovator in the car-wash industry, PDQ’s Ice Bucket Challenge had a unique spin, according to PDQ Web Administrator Ben Dolar: “As a leader in the car-wash industry, we like to do things a little differently. We used a 300-gallon tank of ice water, fed through a LaserWash® 360 bridge in our car-wash bay, to soak a group of willing employees.”

In addition to completing the Ice Bucket Challenge, PDQ Manufacturing will be making a monetary donation to The ALS Association to aid in its fight against amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS). This is just the latest charitable contribution that PDQ has made in recent years with the Make-A-Wish® Foundation of Wisconsin, Service League of Green Bay and Child Life Services Program at St. Vincent’s Hospital past recipients of the company’s benevolence.

The Ice Bucket Challenge went viral this summer after Boston College baseball player Pete Frates, who has ALS and does advocacy work in the battle against the disease, began posting about the challenge on Twitter. As of Sept. 3, The ALS Association reportedly has received $107.4 million in Ice Bucket Challenge donations.
